

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	xi
List of Contributors	xii
Acknowledgements	xix
1 Introduction	1
Margot Rawsthorne
References	9
PART 1 ABORIGINAL PERSPECTIVES	11
2 Invisible from the Start: Australian Aboriginal People's Experiences of Difference and Aboriginal Community-Controlled Organisations	13
Sigrid Herring and Jo Spangaro
Further readings	23
References	23
3 Transforming Classrooms: Developing Culturally Safe Learning Environments	26
Mareese Terare
Introduction	26
Background	27
Aboriginal historical experiences with the colonial education system and resultant current outcomes	30
Political human rights: Epistemologies, ontologies and axiologies	31
Adult learning theories	32
Cultural safety	34
Reflections	36
Conclusion	37
Further readings	37
References	37
4 Ownership and Protection of Aboriginal Knowledge: Academic Response and Responsibility	39
Bindi Bennett
The analogy	39
The 'collaborative' omelette	41

When does the use of Aboriginal knowledge in academia become cultural appropriation?	42
What is intellectual property?	43
What is Indigenous knowledge?	44
So what?	46
Case studies	47
Reflective questions	48
Further readings	48
References	49
PART 2 CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES ON CULTURAL DIFFERENCE	53
5 Islamophobia and Social Work Collusion	55
Lobna Yassine and Linda Briskman
Introduction	55
Islamophobia in Australia	56
Locating ourselves	56
What is Islamophobia?	58
The politics of Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) policies and programs	59
Problematising Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) policies and programs	60
Control through 'community' and 'Australian-ness'	60
Fixing dangerous minds	62
The Countering Violent Extremism (CVE) industry	63
Colour-blind policies and the State as 'neutral'	64
A critical social work perspective	65
Conclusion	67
Further readings	68
References	68
6 Pushing Back Against Stereotypes: Muslim Immigrant Women's Experiences of Domestic Violence	71
Nafiseh Ghafournia
Introduction	71
Domestic violence among immigrant and refugee women	72
Theoretical framework	73
Method	74
Findings	74
Discussion	80
Implications for social work practice and policy	81
Conclusion	82
Further readings	82
References	83

7	Working with Cultural Differences: Teaching First-Year Undergraduate Students to Unpack Unjust Power	85
	Jioji Ravulo
	Introduction	85
	Theory and approaches	86
	Deconstructionism and différance	86
	Power/discourse/marginalisation	87
	Epistemologies of ignorance	89
	Social justice education	90
	Transformational learning	91
	Case study: Working with cultural differences	92
	History and context of the Working with Cultural Differences (WWCD) unit	92
	Teaching content (lecture and tutes)	94
	Embrace differences (social media inclusion and Facebook page)	97
	Areas of development and possible future direction	97
	Conclusion	98
	Further readings	98
	References	98
PART 3 CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES ON GENDER DIFFERENCE		101
8	Allyship and Social Justice: Men as Allies in Challenging Men's Violence and Discrimination Against Women	103
	Alankaar Sharma
	Allyship and social justice	104
	Men as allies	105
	Relationship with feminism and feminist women	107
	Relationship with self	110
	Guilt	110
	Positivity towards self	112
	Relationship with other (profeminist) men	113
	Politicising MVDAW and resisting depoliticisation	114
	Conclusion	115
	Further readings	116
	References	116
9	Women and Older Age: Exploring the Intersections of Privilege and Oppression Across Lifetimes	120
	Tina Kosteki and Selma Macfarlane
	Introduction	120
	Theoretical orientations for intersectional research	121
	Problematising women's later life experiences	122
	An intersectional approach to research on women and ageing	125

Challenges in intersectional research practice	128
Conclusion	132
Further readings	133
References	133
10 Uncovering Games of Truth: A Collaborative Exploration of the Ways Transgender and Non-Binary Young People Access Health Care and Support	137
Rebecca Howe, Amy Harper and Sekneh Hammoud-Beckett
Our collaborative process	139
What sort of 'games' are we talking about?	139
Being trans is a medical condition	142
Listening for truths and openness	146
Conclusion	148
Further readings	150
Acknowledgements	150
References	150
PART 4 CRITICAL PERSPECTIVES ON NORMALITY AND DIFFERENCE	153
11 Accepting My Illness? Problematising the Claims of Mental Health Anti-Stigma Efforts	155
Emma Tseris
Introduction	155
Examining key messages	157
Mental illness as a common experience	159
Mental illness can affect anyone	159
Mental illness does not define you	159
The general public needs educating	160
Effective help is available	161
Recovery is possible	161
Talking about one's own experience of mental illness is empowering	162
Reflexivity and lived experience	163
Order and legitimacy	164
Rigidity and meaning-making	166
Conclusion	166
Further readings	167
References	168
12 Supported Employment and Social Inclusion: An Analysis from the Perspective of People with Intellectual Disabilities	170
Barbara Soares e Madureira
Introduction	170
Work	171
Disability as difference	171

Supported employment	172
Social inclusion	173
Method	174
The experience of work	175
Relationships	175
Personal and social changes as a result of employment	177
Training and further opportunities for employment	177
Community participation	177
Discussion and conclusion	179
Further readings	181
References	181
PART 5 POLICY WORK ACROSS DIFFERENCE	183
13 Feminist Gains Lost: Public Policy and the ‘Genericising’ of Women Survivors of Domestic Violence	185
Susan Heward-Belle
Introduction	185
Domestic violence, homelessness and housing	187
Feminist activism and the women’s refuge movement	187
The policy context	188
The Going Home, Staying Home (GSH) ‘reform’	190
The study	191
Overview of the reform experience	192
Gains lost for domestic violence service provision	193
Gains lost for children and young people	194
Gains lost for domestic violence recovery and survival	195
Gains lost for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and migrant women	196
Gains lost for the domestic violence workforce: Specialist knowledge and skills	197
Gains lost for workers	198
Gains lost for the feminist movement	198
Conclusion	199
Further readings	200
Acknowledgements	200
References	200
14 Who Can Argue with Blue Sky? The Questionable Alliance between Difference and the Market in Disability Policy	203
Amanda Howard
Choice and control, reasonable and necessary	205
Human rights and the market	207
Operationalising tensions	209
Rise of the National Disability Insurance Agency (NDIA): the state and the market	209

The very managed market in implementation	210
Where to go from here?	215
Further readings	216
References	216
15 Collisions Between the State and the Evil Spirit: Home Care in Indigenous Communities	218
Frank T.Y. Wang and Sheng-Pei Tsai
Background	219
Literature review	219
Research design	221
The Tao people and their Anito belief	221
Findings	223
Discussion and conclusion	227
Further readings	229
References	230
PART 6 RESISTANCES AND REFLECTIONS	231
16 Concepts, Theories and the Politics of Difference: A Discussion of Select Terms	233
Susan Goodwin
Binaries/binarism/binary thinking	235
Decolonisation/decolonising theory	236
Difference/the politics of difference	236
Diversity	237
Other/Othering	238
Postcolonialism	239
Poststructuralism	240
Privilege/white privilege	241
Settler colonialism	242
Conclusion	243
References	243
17 Afterword: Resistance, White Fragility and Late Neoliberalism	247
Donna Baines and Fran Waugh
Introduction	247
Code of Ethics and the neoliberal context of practice	249
Vignettes from practice	252
Conclusion	258
Further readings	258
References	258
Index	261

1

Introduction

Margot Rawsthorne

As editors we wish to start this book with an acknowledgement of the ongoing history of dispossession and deliberate attacks on the cultures and spirituality of Australia's First Peoples. This history gives us great pain and enormous regret at the devaluing of knowledge acquired by the First Peoples during 70,000 years of continuous life on this land. The inability of non-Indigenous Australians to learn from First Peoples is to our collective detriment, whether through inclusive social norms or communal forms of child-rearing, the demise of soil, or threats of extinction of unique fauna.

Social work practice is implicated not only in the discounting of Aboriginal knowledge and an unwillingness to learn from it but also in the destructive intervention in the lives of generations of Indigenous Australians (Bennett, 2015; Briskman, 2016). Working across difference with Australia's First Peoples requires urgent attention. Accordingly, the book includes several chapters written by or with Indigenous Australians. These chapters are not presented as 'the' Aboriginal perspective but offer insight into the experience of multiple 'differences' in settings as diverse as academia, health, community and violence against women services. For non-Indigenous (white) readers these chapters provide an opportunity to listen and learn from Indigenous Australians, from a position of cultural humility.

This book arose from our shared struggles in practice, theory, research and teaching to 'work across difference'. The term 'differences' denotes a set of highly politicised, socially constructed, social relations that reinforce inequity, dominance and oppression. Difference benefits racially stratified, patriarchal capitalism but are simultaneously a site of struggle, something to work with and across, something that we inhabit and may inadvertently reproduce through daily practice and something that can be challenged and dealt with more equitably with a goal of social justice and fairness.

Writing from her social positioning within the intersections of race, gender, class and homophobia, the late Audre Lorde (2012) argued that Certainly there are very real differences between us of race, age, and sex. But it is not those differences between us that are separating us. It is rather our refusal to recognize those differences, and to examine the distortions which result from our misnaming them and their effects upon human behaviour and expectation. (p. 17)

Social work and policy studies in Australia are increasingly called on to work across differences in ways that promote social justice and challenge growing inequity. However, as Lorde (Lorde and Rich, 1981) noted, we have no patterns for relating across human differences as equals and, as she argues further, 'Institutionalized rejection of difference is an absolute necessity in a profit economy which needs outsiders as surplus people' (Lorde, 2012, p.115).

This quote highlights the way in which larger social systems benefit from both the denial of difference and our lack of strategies for identifying and working across real and imagined differences. These 'differences' justify inequity, harm and divide us and thrive off the existence of disposable people and regions of the world that can be exploited, destroyed and left to decline (Giroux, 2015). Lorde argues further that it is not the differences that separate us, it is our denial of their existence and our inability to critically examine and challenge their impact on social and individual actions and ideas. Too often, we pour the energy needed for recognizing and exploring difference into pretending those differences are insurmountable barriers, or that they do not exist at all. This results in a voluntary isolation, or false and treacherous connections. (Lorde, 2012, p.115; reprint from a 1977 speech delivered to the Modern Language Association)

This book is aimed at ending isolations of all kinds and building interconnections that recognise and celebrate differences, redistribute resources and ensure voice and representation in the building of equity-directed social justice practices and policies.

In this collection, the term differences is also used in Lorde's (2012) sense that much of the work of changing social relations lies with those who are more powerfully positioned within intersecting oppressions:

Black and Third World people are expected to educate white people as to our humanity. Women are expected to educate men. Lesbians and gay men are expected to educate the heterosexual world. The oppressors maintain their position and evade their responsibility for their own actions. There is a constant drain of energy which might be better used in redefining ourselves and devising realistic scenarios for altering the present and constructing the future. (p. 92)

Unearned privilege underlies these dynamics. This privilege is not distributed equally but accumulates along axes of power such as maleness, whiteness, gender, immigrant status, able-bodiedness and so forth (Mehrotra, 2010). These socially constructed relations form intersecting nodes of power and privilege that operate without the conscious instigation of those accorded this power in our society. For example, light-skinned immigrants do not wake up in the morning and decide to make use of white-skin privilege; it is part of everyday interactions without the need for conscious activation. Part of working across difference includes recognising and 'un-doing' this invisible but omnipresent privilege (Kennedy-Kish et al., 2017; Pease, 2010).

The contributors to this book highlight the need for intersectionality in our analysis, as critical race theorists have identified, as a tool for resistance (Carbado et al., 2013; Crenshaw, 1989). Intersectionality recognises that oppressions never operate singly; rather they overlap, reinforce, undermine and contest in complex and ever-changing webs (Mehrotra, 2010). Dismantling the many, intersecting threads of these webs requires a crisp, critical analysis and openness to new ways of challenging inequity and building social justice.

This collection does not provide a prescription for working across difference; instead it problematises intersecting differences and privileges in numerous contexts, and offers insights into more equitable ways of undertaking social work and making social policy. Working across difference is more than simply having promotional material in other languages, scattering around a few rainbow flags or employing the occasional non-white person. The task of 'working across difference' requires profound, ongoing, consistent efforts to make any meaningful progress towards our shared commitment to social change and equity. Oppression and privilege are deeply embedded through the hegemony of binary genders, settler colonialism, racism, ageism and ableism (Allan et al., 2009; Kennedy-Kish et al., 2017).

Despite social work's genuine concern with the experience of those subjected to oppression and 'othered', it remains too often uncritical of its own privilege and power, and its participation, often unintended, in sustaining oppressive relations (Bennett, 2015; Briskman, 2016). In this book we take a critical stance to the social work profession's current and historical 'social justice project'. We question the extent to which the actions of social workers and social policy makers have challenged structural oppressions. We ask, what would decolonised practice look like? How do we respond to mental distress without resorting to power/privilege/violence? In what ways do our practices disable? How do we disrupt the 'marking' of some identities as less than? This critical questioning of our role as social workers, policy makers and community activists needs to inform our ongoing 'social justice project', which may provide a pathway for rethinking social work beyond merely 'doing good'.

In rethinking social work beyond unintentionally doing harm while intending to be 'doing good' we are also reclaiming the centrality of the profession's ethical pursuit of human rights and social justice (IASSW, 2004). The danger of human rights and social justice becoming optional in social work practice (Ife, 2012) is even greater in the current context of austerity and late neoliberalism (Baines, 2017; Mullaly, 2010). Neoliberalism is understood in this collection as simultaneously a project, an ideology and a process (Dean, 2010; Harvey, 2007). The ideology of neoliberalism has introduced 'a new model of citizenship in which societal rights and responsibilities transform social problems into the failures of the individuals rather than that of society' (Birch and Mykhnenko, 2009, p. 7).

Taking this further, Roy (2014) argues that neoliberalism reconceptualises poverty as an 'identity problem', negating the systemic causes of inequality: 'Poverty ... is often framed as an identity problem, as though the poor have not been created by injustice but are a lost tribe who just happen to exist' (p. 37). Neoliberal ideology is so pervasive that it becomes almost impossible to challenge (as it is presented as the only option), saturating mass cultural and political realms, and creating new social norms and monoculture (Gray and Webb, 2013; Harvey, 2007). Under neoliberalism, power relations are reconfigured such that individuals internalise the state's 'marketisation' objectives through self-regulation and self-governance (Foucault, 1984). As such power is decentred, as opposed to being exclusively and overtly hierarchical and authoritarian, as it has become embedded in the beliefs, fears, desires and aspirations of the population (Brown, 2006). This has made neoliberalism almost invisible and the assimilation of social workers into the neoliberal political project less contested than it should be (Gray and Web, 2013; Mullaly, 2010).

Social service organisations and practitioners have been deeply challenged by the doctrine of small government, marketisation, individual responsabilisation, growing inequality and attacks on collective responses and resistance (Fawcett et al., 2010). Social work responses to neoliberal discourses' marking of certain groups as 'different' (read inadequate and unworthy) are often constrained by bureaucratic standardised practices which purport to be neutral (Allan et al., 2009; Gray and Web, 2013; Kennedy-Kish et al., 2017). These standardised practices often target those who social workers seek to work alongside in our social justice work, through imposing income support sanctions, rationing access to support, and/or criminalising and removing children. It is sobering to consider that more Indigenous children are currently in state 'care' than during the period known as the 'Stolen Generation' (Long and Sephton, 2011). In their putative neutrality these practices depoliticise social work practice, remaking it as a technical profession rather than a social justice-engaged vocation (Baines, 2017; Mullaly, 2010).

Through this book and in collaboration with our contributors we sought to explore how social work may repeat, reject, resist or rupture exclusionary practices based on difference. In doing so we deliberately privilege the perspectives of those positioned as 'different', through race, ethnicity, sexuality, gender and ability. In privileging these perspectives we are not suggesting that 'difference' is only a concern of those in dominant cultural positions. Our goal is to open up dialogue and debate concerning notions of difference with a view to the co-creation of new forms of social work practices. We acknowledge the risk of totalising the identities of 'others' through this and have tried to highlight the intersection of multiple (and at times contradictory) positionalities among ourselves and the people we work alongside (Mehrotra, 2010). Through adopting an intersectional stance we aim to resist collapsing difference under universal categories (Tong, 1989) and acknowledge as Lorde does that 'her shackles may look very different to my own' (Lorde, 2012, p. 124). This signals a rejection of the neoliberal discourse of a benign, uncontested 'diversity' which serves to obscure the very real, day-to-day structural inequality and oppression experienced by non-white, distressed, older, disabled and other marginalised people. Though we draw on concepts and strategies from the postmodern and poststructural critique, we consciously seek to avoid the paralysing effect of postmodern perspectives that do not provide the basis for collective political actions (Ramazanoglu and Holland, 2002). Our contributors seek to avoid identity politics that fail to acknowledge the material subjugation of those 'othered' (Zuffery, 2015) or the benefits that accrue to privileged groups through this. Rupturing exclusionary practices requires more than linguistic shifts or clever deconstructing. It requires structural as well as cultural and political solutions, including a concrete, material redistribution of resources, practices, policies, representation and access to affirming identities and cultural practices (Kennedy-Kish et al., 2017).

Though each situation and context requires its own unique strategies rather than a standardised response, the following points are helpful in thinking about and working across difference:

1. Recognising that multiple, intersecting differences exist in every interaction and context (Mehrotra, 2010).
2. Developing a critical lens for analysing these differences and understanding why they exist in any given context, who they benefit/harm and how to use this analysis to build consensus for action.

3. Working as an ally with those socially positioned as less powerful and less privileged (Bishop, 2012; Mullaly, 2010). Building conscious ties of support.
4. Accepting the leadership of oppressed groups and providing active, not passive, support for their social justice initiatives and critiques of power and privilege.
5. Using one's privileged position and the power that is socially accorded to this positioning in alliance with oppressed groups (Baines, 2017).

Working across differences, using these five points, can be accomplished through: direct practice with groups, individuals, families and communities; social policy; community and social policy projects; social activism; critical pedagogy; and theory.

We hope this book will be of interest and use to students, practitioners, policy makers and educators. It is likely that readers will focus on specific chapters reflecting their own priorities. To more fully comprehend the goal of this book, however, we would encourage readers to explore a range of chapters. In this way it will be clearer how 'difference' is structured, highlighting the commonalities in the struggles of young people of diverse sexualities, Aboriginal academics or Muslim women, for example. Each contributor has been asked to problematise normative and instrumental approaches which reproduce top-down toolbox approaches to working across difference. In doing so the contributors have drawn heterogeneously on anti-oppressive theories, including Indigenous knowledges, queer theory, intersectional feminism, critical mental health and critical race theory. Of course, one chapter can only be a taster – for those wishing to explore further issues raised by the contributors a list of resources is included.

For educators, we suggest chapters are paired, with student learning supported by guiding questions. Again we would encourage the pairing of diverse chapters in order to enable more sophisticated critical engagement. Guiding questions (for students but also others) might include:

- How are oppression and/or privileges structured and/or experienced by various groups of people?
- How is difference marked by neoliberal discourses or practices?
- How can the insights of each chapter be used to challenge inequity in social work practice and policy?

The book is divided into six parts. Reflecting our commitment to foregrounding the experience of difference and engaging with Indigenous knowledges, Part I focuses on Aboriginal Perspectives. It comprises three chapters incorporating the knowledge of practitioners, educators and academics. Sigrid Herring and Jo Spangaro (Chapter 2) bring into focus the experiences of Aboriginal community-controlled health organisations. The chapter highlights the contradictory experience (which appears common) of those both marked as requiring intensive state scrutiny and simultaneously unworthy of acknowledgement. Mareese Terare (Chapter 3) inspires educators to embrace difference within learning environments as a resource for transformational learning. The chapter argues that developing cultural safety is not merely about creating space for marginal voices but also about creating space for those with privilege. In this way these learning and teaching moments can reject, resist or rupture exclusionary practices based on difference. The final chapter in Part I by Bindi Bennett (Chapter 4) explores the tensions and risks of ‘incorporating’ Indigenous knowledges into white academia. The chapter challenges us to consider how non-Indigenous practice, sometimes unintentionally (sometimes not), leads to cultural appropriation. All three chapters in Part I engage with the impact of white privilege on Aboriginal Australians, highlighting the constant vigilance required not to replicate oppression and providing strategies for ‘doing better’.

Part II explores the experiences of those marked as ‘culturally different’, through language, cultural practices and religion. Two of the three chapters in this section foreground the assumed difference of non-Christian Australians. Lobna Yassine (Chapter 5) and Nafiseh Ghafournia (Chapter 6) write from the position of Muslim women at a time of cultural hostility, challenging social workers to critically reflect and engage with the political task of confronting racist stereotyping. The chapter by Yassine and co-author Linda Briskman (Chapter 5) documents the collusion of leading social work organisations with efforts to vilify and marginalise Muslim people and suggests that we all have a role to play in resisting oppression in its professional and personal manifestations. Jioji Ravulo (Chapter 7) provides inspiration to educators seeking to engage with this political task in the classroom and through their teaching.

Part III shifts our focus to gender as a site of political struggle and contest. Alankaar Sharma (Chapter 8) questions the co-option of feminist positioning by men in challenges to men’s violence and discrimination against women. He advocates for a position of allyship whereby men hold themselves and each other accountable for gendered violence. Tina Kostecki and Selma Macfarlane (Chapter 9) provide a tool for practitioners and researchers alike in uncovering older women’s life stories. Readers are invited to experiment with the ‘Intersectionality Tool’ in their practice to avoid creating a static, monochrome picture. Rebecca Howe, Amy Harper and Sekneh Hammoud-Beckett (Chapter 10) draw on Foucault’s notion of ‘Games of Truth’ in a powerful collaboration with transgender and non-binary young people. The chapter demands we interrogate our role in creating ‘truth’ for ‘others’.

Part IV asks us to consider how the concept of ‘normality’ shapes the experiences of those outside that ‘norm’. Emma Tseris (Chapter 11) adopts a critical stance in exploring social work practice with those people marked by psychiatry as ‘mentally ill’. She confronts social work’s co-option by psychiatric discourses that can lead to socially unjust practice. Barbara Soares e Madureira (Chapter 12) examines the social inclusion potential of supported employment for people with intellectual disabilities, highlighting first-person lived experiences.

In Part V our contributors turn their attention to policy responses to ‘difference’ across a wide terrain. Susan Heward-Belle (Chapter 13) questions policy assumptions that all homelessness is the same. Her research with refuge workers reveals that the specific experiences of women survivors of domestic violence cannot and should not be ‘generalised’ as simply homelessness. Amanda Howard (Chapter 14) takes a critical stance on the marrying of market forces and human rights within the National Disability Support Scheme (NDIS). She highlights how this marrying has rendered silent significant concerns about neoliberal marketisation. The lived experience of policy is Frank Wang and Sheng-Pei Tsai’s focus in the final chapter (Chapter 15) of Part V. Highlighting Indigenous aged care practices in Taiwan, they reveal the possibility of conflict between the ‘social justice’ policy and self-determination.

In the final part of the book, Part VI, we provide some reflections and explore resistances. Susan Goodwin analyses select poststructural and postcolonial terms in Chapter 16. Though not all authors in the book used poststructural theory, the concepts she highlights are very useful in the analysis of socially constructed difference. The chapter can be used as a glossary or as a thought piece to spark further critical engagement with some of the concepts and ideas used in the book. Donna Baines and Fran Waugh provide an Afterword in Chapter 17, in which they confront the very real risk of ultra-right challenges to our social justice project and the pervasiveness of white fragility in the face of resistance and challenge from those marginalised within existing systems. Drawing on two extended vignettes the chapter seeks to undercover resistances in everyday social work practice. It asks, what tools can social workers use in the context of late neoliberalism to find spaces for critical reflection and generate alternative, social justice-engaged, diversity-embracing practices and policies? The Afterword concludes that resistance is still possible and avidly pursued by many in the social justice social work endeavour.

References

- Allan, J., Briskman, L. and Pease, B. (2009). Critical Social Work: Theories and Practices for a Socially Just World. Melbourne: Allen & Unwin.
- Baines, D. (Ed.) (2017). Doing Anti-Oppressive Practice: Social Justice Social Work, 3rd Edition. Halifax, NS: Fernwood.
- Bennett, B. (2015). Stop deploying your white privilege on me! Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander engagement with the Australian Association of Social Workers. Australian Social Work, 68(1), 19–31.
- Birch, K. and Mykhnenko, V. (2009). Varieties of neoliberalism? Restructuring in large industrially dependent regions across western and eastern Europe. Journal of Economic Geography, 9(3), 355–380.
- Bishop, A. (2002). Becoming an Ally: Breaking the Cycle of Oppression in People. London: Zed Books.
- Briskman, L. (2016). Decolonizing Social Work in Australia: Prospect or Illusion. In J. Coates, M. Grey and M. Yellowbird (Eds.), Indigenous Social Work around the World (pp. 111–122). London: Routledge.
- Brown, W. (2006). American nightmare: Neoliberalism, neoconservatism, and de-democratization. Political Theory, 34(6), 690–714.
- Carbado, D.W., Crenshaw, K.W., Mays, V.M. and Tomlinson, B. (2013). Intersectionality: Mapping the movements of a theory. Du Bois Review: Social Science Research on Race, 10(2), 303–312.
- Crenshaw, K. (1989). Demarginalizing the intersection of race and sex: A black feminist critique of antidiscrimination doctrine, feminist theory and antiracist politics. University of Chicago Legal Forum, 1(8), 139–167.
- Dean, M. (2010). Governmentality: Power and Rule in Modern Society, 2nd edition. London: Sage.
- Fawcett, B., Goodwin, S., Meagher, G. and Phillips, R. (2010). Social Policy for Social Change. Melbourne: Palgrave.
- Foucault, M. (1984). The Foucault Reader. New York: Pantheon Books.
- Giroux, H.A. (2015). Against the Terror of Neoliberalism: Politics beyond the Age of Greed. London: Routledge.
- Gray, M. and Web, S. (2013). The New Politics of Social Work. London: Palgrave.
- Harvey, D. (2007). A Brief History of Neoliberalism. Oxford: Oxford University Press.
- Ife, J. (2012). Human Rights and Social Work: Towards Rights-Based Practice. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- IASSW (International Association of Schools of Social Work) (2004). Ethics in Social Work, Statement of Principles. <https://www.iassw-aiets.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/10/Ethics-in-Social-Work-Statement-IFSW-IASSW-2004.pdf>.
- Kennedy-Kish, B., Sinclair, R., Carniol, B. and Baines, D. (2017). Case Critical: Social Services and Social Justice in Canada, 7th Edition. Toronto: Between the Lines.
- Long, M. and Sephton, R. (2011). Rethinking the “best interests” of the child: Voices from Aboriginal child and family welfare practitioners. Australian Social Work, 64(1), 96–112. <https://doi.org/10.1080/0312407X.2010.535544>.

- Lorde, A. (2012). Sister Outsider: Essays and Speeches. New York: Crossing Press.
- Lorde, A. and Rich, A. (1981). An interview with Audre Lorde. Signs: Journal of Women in Culture and Society, 6(4), 713–736.
- Mehrotra, G. (2010). Toward a continuum of intersectionality theorizing for feminist social work scholarship. Affilia, 25(4), 417–430. <https://doi.org/10.1177/0886109910384190>.
- Ramazanoglu, C. and Holland, J. (2002). Feminist Methodology: Challenges and Choices. London: Sage.
- Roy, A. (2014). Capitalism: A Ghost Story. Chicago: Haymarket Books.
- Tong, R. (1989). Feminist Thought: A Comprehensive Introduction. London: Routledge.
- Zuffery, C. (2015). Intersectional feminism and social work responses to homelessness. In S. Wahab, B. Anderson-Nathe and C. Gringeri (Eds.), Feminisms in Social Work Research: Promise and Possibilities for Justice Based Knowledge (pp. 104–116). New York: Routledge.

Index

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders Aboriginal perspectives, 11–48 anti-oppressive practice and, 21–3 education and, 26–37
 historical treatment, 13–16, 18, 27, 29–31 housing and, 253
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women in domestic violence refuges, 196–7 in old age, 127–8
 use of ACCHSs, 18–23
- Aboriginal community-controlled health services, 13–23
- Aboriginal culture, 15–16, 18, 20, 22, 30, 127
- Aboriginal kinship system, 15, 30–1
- Aboriginal knowledge, 1, 13, 15–16, 30, 39–48
- aging
 elder care in the Tao community, 218–29 privilege and oppression of older women, 120–33
- allyship
 liberation and, 88
 men as allies to women, 103–15 working across difference and, 6
- Anito belief, 218–29
- anti-immigrant backlash, 71–3, 77, 81–2, 247; see also xenophobia
- anti-Muslim sentiment see Islamophobia
- anti-oppressive practice
 binaries and, 236
 distractions from, 257
 Aboriginal people and, 14–15, 21–3
 culture and, 254
 women and, 114–15
 tenets of, 1–6
- anti-racism
 allyship, 105
 in practice, 22–3, 252–4, 258
- anti-refugee backlash, 247; see also anti-immigrant backlash
- anti-stigma education
 disability and, 180–1
 mental health and, 155–67
 women's refuges and, 198
- anti-terrorism laws see Countering Violent Extremism Policy
- austerity, 4, 247
- Australian Association of Social Workers (AASW), 41, 55–6, 60, 63–7
- Bennett, Bindi on Aboriginal knowledge, 39–49
- Binaries/binarism border identities, 105
 construction of, 87, 235–6, 240
 LGBTQI+ people and, 141–2
 in mental health, 160; see also non-binary people
- capacity-building, 88–9
- care, 35, 123, 126–7
 carers, 65, 178; see also health care; home care; social work profession
- chicken and egg analogy, 39–41
- choice and control in the NDIS, 204–16
- cis-gender feminism and, 104, 108
 gender diverse people and, 137–8, 147, 236
- classism, 73, 158, 252–3, 256–7; see also socioeconomic marginalisation

- Code of Ethics in social work, 66–7, 249–58
- collaboration with Aboriginal people, 40–3, 46–8 in feminism, 198–9
with gender diverse people, 139
in social work, 255, 257
- collective action attacks on, 4, 249
collective accountability, 139, 148–9 harnessing, 66–7, 258
- collective learning, 34, 91, 93
- colonialism
Aboriginal people and, 13–14, 16, 27–32, 39–42, 197
Muslims and, 58
Tao people and, 218–19, 222
othering and, 238
in social work, 249
white fragility and, 248; see also decolonisation; postcolonialism; settler colonialism
- colour-blind approach, 64–5
- community, 78, 128, 141
development, 48, 86; see also Aboriginal community-controlled health services
- community engagement in CVE, 60–1
for people with disabilities, 170–81; see also anti-stigma education
- conflict, 37, 66, 222; see also violence
- Countering Violent Extremism Policy, 55–65
- critical mental health theory, 156–8, 163, 167
- critical pedagogy, 6, 28
- critical social work, 65–7, 85–6, 132–3, 167
- critical thinking about gender, 112, 138–40, 146
about mental health, 156, 158, 163–4, 167
about older women, 121–2
about terms, 233
in allyship, 104
critical perspectives on cultural difference, 53–100
critical perspectives on gender difference, 101–49
critical perspectives on normality and difference, 153–81
cultural, 88, 240
disability and, 176–80
critical perspectives on normality and difference, 153–81
in education, 93, 97
importance of, 2–5
knowledge and, 87
in practice, 255–7; see also reflection and reflexivity
- cultural appropriation, 42–4
- cultural humility, 1, 35
- cultural knowledge see Aboriginal knowledge
- culturally and linguistically diverse people, 72; see also immigrants; Indigenous people; religion
- cultural safety in classrooms, 26–37, 95
in providing care, 21–3, 219
- culture
Aboriginal, 15–16, 18, 20, 22, 30, 127
critical perspectives on cultural difference, 53–100
cultural humility, 1
cultural identity, 241 cultural solutions, 5
cultural vitality, 36–7
domestic violence and, 73, 78, 80–2
othering of, 239–40
in practice, 252–7
race and, 237
Tao, 219, 223–4
Western, 158, 235
working with cultural differences, 85–98; see also immigrants; Indigenous people; monoculture; religion; Western ways of knowing and thinking; whiteness
- curricula, 30, 34, 46, 90
- decolonisation, 228–9, 236; see also colonialism
- Derrida, Jacques, 86–7, 240
- difference
critical perspectives on cultural difference, 53–100
critical perspectives on gender difference, 101–49
critical perspectives on normality and difference, 153–81
cultural, 88, 240
disability and, 176–80

- domestic violence and, 185–6, 199
- in epistemologies of ignorance, 89
- extremism as, 62
- focus on, 56
- formation of, 1–3
- mental health and, 167
- policy work across difference, 183–229
- politics of, 1, 233–43
- in practice, 251–3, 256
- supporting, 3–6, 85–6
- tolerance for, 159; see also diversity; intersectionality
- disabilities, people with
 - dehumanisation of, 239
 - supported employment and social inclusion for, 170–81; see also National Disability Insurance Scheme
- disciplinary power, 62–3
- discrimination
 - in education, 90
 - othering and, 239
 - quotas to reduce, 181
 - theories of, 241
 - against trans people, 143, 145; see also anti-immigrant backlash; Islamophobia; racism; sexism
- disempowerment, 14, 35, 121, 126, 199; see also power
- diversity
 - in education, 26, 35, 37, 91
 - of experiences, 189
 - in practice, 251–2, 254–7
 - sampling for, 130
 - supporting, 85–6, 249
 - use of term, 236–8
 - of women, 121–2, 127, 130–3; see also difference
- domestic violence
 - Muslim immigrants' experiences of domestic violence, 71–82
 - shelters, 185–200, 252–4
- dominant discourse, 15, 85, 89, 123, 126, 165
- education
 - Aboriginal, 14, 46
 - culturally safe, 26–37
 - CVE in, 62–4, 68
 - on domestic violence, 81
 - gender and, 110, 127
 - ideal, 87
 - of social workers, 85–98, 257; see also anti-stigma education; critical pedagogy; knowledge; learning
- egg and chicken analogy, 39–41
- employment
 - competition for, 247
 - for people with disabilities, 170–81
 - for survivors of domestic violence, 188
- empowerment see power
- epistemology of ignorance, 89–90
- equity
 - for Aboriginal people, 27, 46
 - backlash against, 247
 - intersectionality and, 126
 - for people with disabilities, 171, 203, 207
 - in practice, 249, 251, 253, 255; see also inequality
- ethics see Code of Ethics in social work; values
- evil spirit (Anito) belief, 218–29
- exclusion
 - of Aboriginal people, 14, 16, 30
 - cultural, 237–8, 247–8
 - gendered, 107, 109, 121, 123
 - of immigrants, 88
 - of mentally ill people, 158
 - of Muslims, 64, 66
 - of people with disabilities, 170–81, 204, 209
 - social work and, 5, 253, 258
 - of Tao people, 219–20, 226; see also marginalisation
- family ideology, 223, 228
- feminism
 - allyship and, 103–4, 106–15
 - feminist gains lost in domestic violence refugees, 185–200
 - feminist theory, 73, 121–3, 235, 237
 - older women and, 121–3, 126, 129, 131
 - women in developing countries and, 240
- First Peoples see Indigenous people

- Foucault, Michel, 62–3, 87, 240; see also Games of Truth
- front-line workers, 86, 229
- Games of Truth, 137–46, 148–9
- gender
- binaries and, 235–6
 - critical perspectives on gender
 - difference, 101–49
 - identity, 112–13, 140, 142, 146, 240
 - male fragility, 248
 - social construction of, 237; see also non-binary people; sexism; trans people; women
- gendered violence
- challenging, 103–15
 - pervasiveness of, 124; see also domestic violence
- government
- housing for survivors of domestic violence, 185–200
 - impact on social work, 4, 250, 252, 254–5
 - response to ACCHSs, 16
 - response to immigration, 71
 - of the Tao people, 225–6, 228–9; see also colonialism; Countering Violent Extremism Policy; National Disability Insurance Scheme
- Hall, Stuart, 88, 238
- health, 123–4, 127, 194; see also mental illness
- health care
- for gender diverse people, 137–49; see also Aboriginal community-controlled health services; National Disability Insurance Scheme
- home care
- for Tao people, 218–29
 - workers, 224–5
- housing
- domestic violence shelters, 185–200, 252–4
 - for gender diverse people, 148
 - for older women, 120, 124
 - for Tao people, 222–4
- human rights
- Aboriginal people and, 27–8, 31–2, 34, 36–7
 - allyship and, 104
 - disability and, 171, 205, 207–9, 215–16
 - domestic violence and, 188
 - to knowledge, 43–6
 - mental health and, 161
 - in social work, 4, 249–50, 255
 - humility, cultural, 1, 35
- identity
- cultural, 35–6, 41, 61
 - fluid, 127
 - gender, 112–13, 140, 142, 146
 - mental health and, 160, 164
 - neoliberalism and, 4–5
 - of older women, 122–3
 - poststructuralism and, 240
 - professional, 86, 89, 126
- immigrants
- domestic violence towards
 - immigrant women, 71–82, 196–7, 253
 - immigration policy, 71, 77, 81–2, 196–7; see also anti-immigrant backlash
- inclusion see exclusion
- Indigenous people see Aboriginal...; colonialism; Tao people
- individualisation
- of aging, 128
 - of disability policy, 203–4, 207–9, 213, 215–16
 - gender and, 146, 186
 - of mental health, 122, 156, 161, 163
 - reasons for, 251
 - work and, 171
- inequality
- of Aboriginal people, 16, 21
 - difference and, 1–6
 - in education, 85–6, 88–9
 - gender, 72, 80–1, 105–7, 115, 124, 127, 133, 167, 186, 237, 248
 - intersectional, 120–3
 - of mentally ill people, 160
 - of Muslims, 56, 68
 - of people with disabilities, 179–80
 - in practice, 253–5, 258

- racial, 229, 237–8, 248, 253–4
- of survivors of domestic violence, 80–1
- of the Tao people, 219
- terminology of, 233–43; see also equity
- intellectual disabilities, people with
 - NDIS and, 214
 - supported employment and social inclusion for, 170–81
- intellectual property, 43–6
- intersectionality
 - culture and, 14, 65–6, 73–4, 76, 80, 82
 - disability and, 171, 186, 214
 - gender and, 120–33, 139, 145
 - importance of, 3, 5, 161
 - privilege and, 104–5
 - teaching and, 94
- interventions
 - Aboriginal people and, 1, 17, 22, 30
 - CVE, 60
 - mental health and, 159, 164, 167
 - for people with disabilities, 210
 - privilege and, 242
 - violence and, 111, 113, 115, 188–9, 200
- invisibility
 - of Aboriginal people, 13–23, 42
 - binarism and, 235
 - of colonialism, 197
 - of difference, 123
 - of equity, 255
 - of gender diversity, 144
 - mental health and, 158, 162–3
 - NDIS and, 204
 - of neoliberalism, 4
 - of older women, 132
 - of privilege, 3, 104
 - of whiteness, 66
 - of women's needs, 192; see also visibility
- Islamophobia
 - Countering Violent Extremism Policy, 59–65
 - Islamophobia industry, 56, 65
 - Islamophobic incidents, 56, 72
- learning, 22, 115, 176–7; see also education; knowledge
- LGBTQI+, 73, 146, 148, 240; see also non-binary people; trans people
- liberation
 - allyship in, 88, 109, 113
 - disability and, 208
 - in education, 28–9, 33
 - Mad activism, 159
- listening, 68, 139, 146–9
- lived experience, 125, 140, 156, 163–4
- long-term care see home care
- Lorde, Audre, 2, 5, 107–8
- Mad studies, 156, 158–9
- male fragility, 248
- male violence see gendered violence
- managerialism, 228, 250, 258; see also private market
- marginalisation
 - of CALD people, 21, 71, 81–2, 253–4
 - of disability, 172, 180
 - discourses of, 87–9
 - educating about, 93
 - mental health and, 155, 159
 - of non-hegemonic masculinity, 108
 - of older women, 120, 132
 - othering and, 88, 239
 - social work and, 67–8, 253–4, 257–8; see also exclusion; othering; segregation; socioeconomic marginalisation
- marketisation
 - feminism and, 186, 198
 - NDIS and, 205, 207–16; see also managerialism; private market
- men's violence see gendered violence
- mental distress, 156, 158, 163, 167
- mental illness
 - anti-stigma education, 155–67
 - cultural safety and, 35
 - gender and, 139–43, 145
 - NDIS and, 211–12
 - in refugees, 197
- monoculture, 4
- Mullaly, Bob, 4–5, 249, 251
- Muslim people
 - women's experiences of domestic violence, 71–82; see also Islamophobia

- National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS), issues with, 203–16
- neoliberalism
 social work and, 4–6, 66, 247–58
 disability and, 171–2, 205, 207–8
 domestic violence and, 186
 effect on health care, 138–9, 146, 148 effect on older women, 120–1, 123, 125–6, 128, 132 effect on Tao people, 220
 mental health and, 159–60, 162, 167
- neurodiversity, 156; see also mental illness
- non-binary people
 disrupting binarism, 236
 health care for, 137–49
 violence against, 104
- othering
 in education, 93
 marginalisation and, 88, 239
 racial, 13–14, 17–18, 65, 238–9
 social work's response to, 3, 5
 theory behind, 238–9
- participation
 in education, 91
 of people with disabilities, 172–4, 177–9, 206
 sexism and, 105
 social work and, 60–1, 68, 249–50, 255, 257
- Pease, Bob, 137–8
- people with disabilities see disabilities challenging inequality, 2–6, 247, 250–1, 256 disability in, 203–16 discourse analysis in, 240
 in education, 27, 96
 health, 127
 Indigenous people in, 13, 16–18, 30, 228, 236, 243
 inequitable, 248–9, 256–8 mental health, 156
 neoliberal, 120, 123, 126
 older women in, 130, 132
 policy work across difference, 183–229
 regarding domestic violence, 81, 185–200 regarding employment, 181; see also colour-blind approach; Countering Violent Extremism Policy
- politics
 of difference, 1, 233–43
 gender diverse people and, 146–7
 of mental health, 158–60, 163
 of social work, 5, 66, 251
 women and, 103, 105–6, 114–15, 121–3, 125–7, 185; see also government; neoliberalism; ultra-right
- postcolonialism, 233–5, 239–40
- postmodernism, 5, 121–2, 139
- poststructuralism, 5, 86, 129, 233–4, 240
- poverty
 of older women, 120, 123–4, 126, 131
 view of, 4, 239, 247; see also classism; socioeconomic marginalisation
- power
 of Aboriginal people, 14, 16, 20, 22
 in allyship, 104
 cultural, 35
 domestic violence and, 186, 191, 199
 in education, 86–90, 93, 97–8
 fragility and, 248
 of gender diverse people, 140–3, 145–9
 in intersectionality, 65
 of mentally ill people, 160–3, 166–7
 of older women, 121–3, 125–7, 132–3
 of people with disabilities, 172, 174, 181, 204–8
 in social work, 3–4, 6, 240, 250–1, 253–4, 256
 of Tao people, 229
 theories of, 2–4, 87, 238–40; see also disempowerment; dominant discourse; privilege; see also anti-oppressive practice; Countering

- Violent Extremism Policy;
standardisation
- private market, 159, 247–8, 250–1; see also employment; marketisation
- privilege
in education, 89–90
gender and, 138–9, 142–4, 146
male, 73, 107–8, 110–14
mental health and, 160
Muslims and, 62, 65
of older women, 120–33
in social work, 3–6, 58, 67, 103–4, 251
theories of, 87, 235, 237–8, 241–2
throughout time, 120–33
white, 16, 42, 58, 65, 241–2, 248, 254, 257–8; see also power
- professionalisation, 66, 162
- professionalism, 90
- professions see employment; social work profession
- psychiatry see mental illness
- Racial Discrimination Act 1975* (Cth), 16
- racism
othering and, 239
psychology and, 158
rise of, 247
social construction of, 237 towards Aboriginal people, 13–14, 17–23, 27–9, 30–1 towards immigrants, 88 towards Muslims, 56, 58, 64, 72–3 towards Tao people, 223–4; see also anti-immigrant backlash; anti-racism; Islamophobia; white fragility
- recovery, 156–7, 161–2
- reflection and reflexivity
about gender, 107, 110–11, 149
about mental health, 163–4
about older women, 129, 132–3 critical, 67, 90–1, 104, 110–11, 129, 133, 149, 249, 251, 254–5, 257
in education, 35–6, 96
resistance and, 231–58
towards oneself, 91, 104, 149
- refugees, 247; see also immigrants
- religion, 78–9, 81, 197; see also Muslim people; spirituality
- resilience, 60, 75
- resistance
of Aboriginal people, 21, 42
to depoliticisation, 114–15 to domestic violence, 75, 79
marginalisation and, 88
of mentally ill people, 140, 167
of Muslims, 62
to neoliberalism, 125
of older women, 125
reflection and, 231–58
of social work, 3–5, 66, 237, 247–58
of Tao people, 219, 225–6, 228–9
- resources
for Aboriginal people, 22
diversity and, 238
for gender diverse people, 147–8
for learning, 32–3
for mentally ill people, 160–2
for older women, 123, 127
for people with disabilities see National Disability Insurance Scheme
- redistributing, 2, 5
- for survivors of domestic violence, 81, 185, 190
- for Tao people, 224, 229
- risk
disability and, 204, 211–12
domestic violence and, 189, 193, 195–6, 199
LGBTQI+ people and, 141, 147
mental health and, 161
older women and, 126
in practice, 255–7
- safety
in ACCHSs, 20
of domestic violence refuges, 187–9, 192, 196–7, 200
of gender diverse people, 147
of people with disabilities, 210
of the Tao elderly, 224; see also cultural safety

- segregation, 13, 171, 176, 179–80; see also exclusion
- service users
 LGBTQI+, 141–3, 146–8
 mentally ill, 158, 160–2
 in social work, 250–8
- settler colonialism, 3, 140–1, 242–3; see also colonialism
- sexism
 male allyship challenging, 103–15; see also gender
- silencing of voices, 59, 75, 162, 186, 253, 257
- social cohesion, 55, 60, 98, 181
- social construction, 1, 3, 65, 87, 234, 237
- social disadvantage, 189; see also inequality; socioeconomic marginalisation
- social exclusion see exclusion
- social justice
 allyship challenging sexism, 103–15
 backlash against, 247–9
 disability and, 173, 181
 education, 28, 34, 86, 89–92
 feminist, 125–6, 132
 mental health and, 158
 in social work, 1–6, 66–8, 98, 120–1, 247–51, 253–5, 258
 terminology of, 233
- social model of disability, 172, 180
- social work collusion with Islamophobia, 55–68
 neoliberalism and, 126
 privilege and, 3
- social work profession
 Aboriginal people and, 21–2
 aim of, 103
 Code of Ethics, 249–58
 developing a professional identity, 86
 domestic violence and, 81–2, 111, 115, 197–8
 education for, 36–7, 85–98
 gender and, 148
 older women and, 121
 tenets of, 2–6, 247–9 terminology of, 233–43; see also Australian Association of Social Workers (AASW); care; critical social work; policies of social work; practice of social work
- socioeconomic marginalisation, 63, 77, 93, 247, 252–3; see also marginalisation; poverty
- solidarity, 37, 149
- spirituality, 15, 35, 78–9, 81; see also Anito belief; religion
- standardisation, 4–5, 17, 251, 253–4, 258
- stolen generation, 5, 18
- structural inequalities, 3, 5–6, 21–2, 80–1, 103, 105, 113, 115, 132, 215
- supported employment, issues with, 170–81
- systems affecting Aboriginal people, 13–14, 17–18, 21, 30, 32, 65 affecting disability, 203, 207, 211, 213 affecting older women, 121 affecting social work, 254–5 affecting Tao people, 226 gender-based, 105, 112, 140
 neoliberal, 149
 quotas, 181
 racial, 127, 253
 representational, 88
 response to inequality, 2, 4, 89
- Tao people, elder care for, 218–29
- terrorism, CVE policy regarding, 55–65
- Torres Strait Islanders see Aboriginal...
- trans people
 binarism and, 236
 health care for, 137–49
- trauma-informed perspectives, 14, 192
- trust, 18–19, 35, 218, 250
- ultra-right, 247
- ‘unfilial’, view of Tao people as, 223–4
- values
 cultural, 15, 35, 78–80
 in education, 90
 patriarchal, 105
 of social work, 21
 societal structure and, 85, 87–8; see also ethics

- violence, 15, 145, 160, 165, 167, 248;
see also gendered violence
- visibility, 82, 104, 127, 139, 146; see also invisibility
- wellbeing
 - of Aboriginal people, 15, 29
 - in education, 35
 - of gender diverse people, 147
 - of mentally ill people, 161, 167
 - of older women, 132
 - of survivors of domestic violence, 194; see also health
- Western ways of knowing and thinking
 - Aboriginality and, 15, 30, 32, 41, 45–6
 - about gender, 140
 - about Islam, 58, 68
 - binaries and, 235
 - dominance of, 234
 - regarding knowledge and learning, 32, 45–6, 236
- white fragility
 - regarding ACCHSs, 17
 - social work's response to, 56, 249, 251–8
 - workings of, 247–8
- whiteness
 - CVE and, 64–7
 - diversity and, 238
 - dominance of, 31
 - in education, 26
 - of health care, 16–22
 - intersectionality and, 66, 73
 - othering, 239
 - of social work, 58, 66–7, 252–4, 256–8
 - white privilege, 16, 42, 58, 65, 241–2, 248, 254, 257–8
- women
 - male allyship with, 103–15
 - mental health of, 164–7
 - Muslim, 56–9, 66
 - in old age, 120–33; see also Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women; feminism; gendered violence; sexism
- work knowledge, 66, 226, 228–9, 233
- xenophobia
 - disrupting, 249, 252–8
 - rise of, 247; see also anti-immigrant backlash; Islamophobia; racism
- young people
 - domestic violence and, 194–5
 - health care and support for, 137–49
 - policing of, 57, 60–4